MARIGOLD DESIGN

Marigold flowers, or cempasúchil, are deeply significant in Mexico's Day of the Dead (Día de Muertos) celebrations. Their bright orange and yellow hues and strong fragrance are believed to guide the spirits of the deceased back to the living world.

Traditionally, these flowers are used to create paths leading spirits to family altars, where offerings are placed to honor and remember them. Marigolds also symbolize the sun, representing life and death, with their bright color mimicking the sun's rays to help guide the souls of the departed.

Che holiday is a vibrant and festive occasion, marked by colorful decorations, music, and traditional foods, reflecting a deep respect for the cycle of life and death. During this time, it is believed that the souls of the dead return to the world of the living to be with their families. The celebration includes setting up ofrendas (altars), which are decorated with photos, candles, marigolds, and the favorite foods and beverages of the departed
